Zhi Ke breaks Qi stagnation and descends the Qi. Mu Xiang dries and regulates hidden Qi and Phlegm stagnation.

RESOLUTION:

After taking 3 bags for 3 days, 6 roundworm were expelled. He is no longer a picky eater and has no more involuntary eye movements.

DISCUSSION:

Roundworms are a type of threadworm usually stagnating in the small intestine. A male roundworm is approximately 15-30 cm and a female roundworm is approximately 20-35 cm in length. This infectious disease is more common in children than adults. Typical symptoms include pain in the area of the umbilicus, irregular appetite (hunger, lack of hunger, desire for unusual foods), nausea, vomiting, diarrhea or constipation, worms appearing in the stool or vomit, papules or white patches of the face, protrusions in the membrane of the lower lip, and blue-ish patches in the sclera of the eye. In children, this can lead to developmental issues and learning disabilities.

5. Asthma

A 30 year old female patient has been suffering from emotional stress, shortness of breath, cough, asthma, severe hiccups and plum pit throat qi for 3 weeks. She has been using antidepressants with no effect. Her tongue has red sides and a white coating. Her pulse is wiry, small and rapid.

DIAGNOSIS:

Stomach, Liver and Lung Qi stagnation with dampness

TREATMENT PLAN:

Regulate Liver and descend Stomach Qi

FORMULA:

Ding Xiang Shi Di Tang and Ban Xia Huo Po Tang modification

| | | |
|-------------|---------------------------|-----|
| Shi Di | Kaki Calyx Flos | 15g |
| Ding Xiang | Flos Caryophylli | 6g |
| Sheng Jiang | Zingiber Officinale Rosc. | 12g |

Shi Di, Ding Xiang and Sheng Jiang descend Stomach Qi. Shi Di is physically light in weight and thus tends to treat hiccups on the surface level. Surface level treatment implies that it is fast acting but not as long lasting as physically denser herbs which tend to stay in the bloodstream longer. Ding Xiang is aromatic and therefore acts quickly. Sheng Jiang is acrid and warms the surface level of the disorder to stop hiccups.

FOLLOWUP:

She took twenty bags for twenty days. She reported that she was able to walk slowly for up to one hour without any discomfort and her Kidney Yin deficiency symptoms reduced by 90%.

16. Behcet's syndrome / Fox syndrome

A 35 year old female has ulcers in the mouth and vagina. The location of the ulcers alternately switches from the mouth to the genitals. She has been taking vitamins, hormones and herbs that clear heat toxins with no remarkable results. She is irritable and has insomnia. Her tongue is red with a moist, sticky, white coating and her pulse is wiry, slippery and small.

In western medicine, Behcet's syndrome is considered a form of vasculitis. It involves inflammation of the blood vessels that causes sores of the mouth, genitals, and other sores. It also involves swellings of the eye and pain & swelling of the joints. Skin lesions may include acne, erythema, and folliculitis. The etiology is considered unknown and complications include meningitis, arthritis, deep venous thrombosis, hearing and balance disorders, personality changes, blood clots, blindness and digestive disorders.

In Chinese medicine, Fox syndrome refers to sores that come and go just as like a fox darting his head inside and out of a burrow. Fox syndrome, also referred to as Fox puzzling, often references sores such as herpes sores of the mouth, eyes and genitals.
